Gary Polonsky – Munchies

Our favorite munchies, whatever they might be, for breakfast, lunch, or dinner, are all represented in Polonsky's latest work from his on-going food series. The exhibition entitled Munchies incorporates large-scale, vibrant, three-dimensional artworks that are dramatic testament to our cravings for our favorite foods and the human desire to consume.

Polonsky continues his exploration of materials and the creative process itself, utilizing engineering, sculpting and painting to create his fully rendered, textured, and sculptured canvases. The food series implores viewers to touch and experience each piece as it's own installation, with every angle offering a new and profound experience of the work.

From the huge Heinz Ketchup bottle to the more reasonably sized bag of Jack in the Box Onion Rings, to the Club Sandwich, Munchies never fails to treasure the novelty of fun in its pieces. Are you hungry yet?
